About Law Day

In 1958, President Eisenhower proclaimed Law Day to honor the role of law in the creation of the United States of America. Three years later, Congress followed suit by passing a joint resolution establishing May 1 as the official date for Law Day. Presidents since then have systematically issued a Law Day proclamation on May 1st in celebration of the country's commitment to the rule of law.

The United State Code 36 U.S.C. § 113 reads in part: Law Day, U.S.A., is a special day of celebration by the people of the United States (1) in appreciation of their liberties and the reaffirmation of their loyalty to the United States and of their rededication to the ideals of equality and justice under law in their relations with each other and with other countries; and (2) for the cultivation of the respect for law that is so vital to the democratic way of life.

Theme: Miranda...More than Words

Every year the American Bar Association identifies a theme that underlines an important issue related to law. In 2016, the country celebrates the 50th anniversary of one of the nation's best-known U.S. Supreme Court case, Miranda v. Arizona. The Miranda Warning permeates in law enforcement and is ingrained in popular culture through numerous recitations in films and television productions. Miranda is only one part of the story when it comes to ensuring justice. This year's Law Day theme —Miranda...More than Words— will focus on exploring the protections afforded to each of us by the U.S. Constitution. Participants will learn about the 4th, 5th, and 6th Amendments to the United States Constitution, how these rights are safeguarded by courts, and why preserving these principles is fundamental to our liberty.
